

Introduction to Resources

As this Handbook shows, there are many sources of information available on disaster preparedness and response. This information is supplied by a wide range of federal, state and local agencies as well as nongovernmental groups.

Although this Handbook is comprehensive, there is more specific and more detailed information in many cases that could not have been included here. In this section, we have collected the names and addresses of numerous resources at the federal and state levels where additional information can be found. There is also list of publications, videos and training resources. Many groups are working diligently to make their information even more accessible by placing it on the World Wide Web; in section 1.11 we have provided a list of Web addresses which will be useful.

This document is IFAS publication DH 106.